Reunites experts in international law, finance, and economics who share an interest in the development of democratic and effective institutions of global governance. Fundamentally motivated by the need to strengthen economic and financial multilateralism, by reviving the international cooperative spirit that inspired the Bretton Woods agreements of 1944 within the global context of our times. Such a belief has led the GoL to propose economic and institutional reforms, and to submit them to the Leaders of the G20 in anticipation of their periodic summits.

To achieve sustainable development, the Earth Institute is conducting and applying interdisciplinary scientific research to address many cross-cutting issues. We believe that finding solutions to one problem, such as extreme poverty, must involve tackling other related challenges, such as environmental degradation and lack of access to health care and education. Anchored in this unique approach, the Earth Institute is leading the way in this promising and dynamic new field.

The Yale Center for the Study of Globalization was launched to enrich the debate about globalization on campus and to promote the flow of ideas between Yale and the policy world.

The programs and activities of the Center share a common purpose and aim toward one or more goals, all serving to stimulate discussion and examination of the core issues and to connect individuals and institutions whose work contributes to the debate on globalization.

2. Periodicals on Global Governance

- Competition and Change

Brings together research and ideas in global business and political economy in ways that will interest social scientists inside and outside schools of business and management. It features articles that use a variety of social science perspectives to develop understanding of the broad business issues around globalisation and financialisation and their impact on economic organisation and performance, social conditions and policy frameworks. The journal is interdisciplinary and welcomes submissions from international scholars with backgrounds in political and cultural economy, business economics, organizational sociology, economic geography, international relations and development studies.

Editors: Julie Froud, Manchester Business School, University of Manchester, and Sukhdev Johal, School of Management, Royal Holloway, University of London.

- Environmental Policy and Governance

Environmental Policy and Governance is an international, inter-disciplinary journal affiliated with the European Society for Ecological Economics (ESEE). The journal seeks to advance interdisciplinary environmental research and its use to support novel solutions in environmental policy and governance. The journal publishes innovative, high quality articles which examine, or are relevant to, the environmental policies that are introduced by governments or the diverse forms of environmental governance that emerge in markets and civil society. The journal includes papers that examine how different forms of policy and governance emerge and exert influence at scales ranging from local to global and in diverse developmental and environmental contexts. The journal invites analyses that are at the forefront of academic debates and that are of practical significance and policy relevance. Each volume includes guest-edited special issues on themes deemed to be of widespread interest and importance.

- Global Policy Journal

Global Policy is an innovative and interdisciplinary journal bringing together world class academics and leading practitioners to analyse both public and private solutions to global problems and issues. It focuses on understanding globally relevant risks and collective action problems; policy challenges that have global impact; and competing and converging discourses about global risks and policy responses.

Editor: Patrick Dunleavy and David Held
Web: www.globalpolicyjournal.com

- Globalization

Globalization is a peer-reviewed journal devoted to the examination of social, political, economic, and technological globalization. Authors are invited to submit articles on virtually any topic that attends to the issue of globalization. Articles will be published on a per-issue basis with regular volume numbers. All submissions will be peer reviewed in a timely and critical (but constructive) manner. The submission of articles implies a commitment on the part of the author to publish in this journal. Thus, authors who submit articles should not simultaneously submit their manuscripts to other journals.

- Globalizations

Publishes work that explores new meanings of globalization, brings fresh ideas to the concept, broadens its scope and contributes to shaping debates of the future. Dedicated to opening the widest possible space for discussion of alternatives to a narrow economic understanding of globalization. The move from the singular to the plural is deliberate and implies scepticism of the idea that there can ever be a single theory or interpretation of the term. Rather, the journal encourages the exploration and discussion of multiple interpretations and multiple processes that may constitute many possible globalizations, many possible alternatives.

- Wilson Quarterly

Since 1976, The Wilson Quarterly has provided a nonpartisan and non-ideological window on the world of ideas. By presenting the best writing and thinking of academics, specialists, and others to a broad audience, it aims to overcome the specialization and information overload that prevent the public from following developments in significant realms of knowledge. The magazine ranges over many subject areas but always with an eye to public questions: issues in politics and policy, culture, religion, science, and other fields that bear upon our public life.
